

Dwight Phillips

The Spartanburg Downtown Association is a community-based organization that plans, markets, and advocates for Downtown Spartanburg.

The association's goal is to be a guiding force for positive growth and improvement of the downtown area by providing leadership, and marketing as the dynamic center of commerce in the Greater Spartanburg community.

SDA performs services directly related to downtown development, such as promotion and advertising, business retention and recruitment, and planning and problem solving among downtown residents, businesses, property owners, employees, and community leaders.

Dwight Phillips is the Chief Financial Officer at the National Beta Club, the nation's largest non-profit educational youth organization. The National Beta Club is located in downtown Spartanburg and was founded 75 years ago by Dr. John W. Harris, a Wofford Professor.

Dwight moved to Spartanburg after graduating from Oral Roberts University with a degree in history and pre-law in 1989. He worked for an Atlanta law firm on a local case directly after graduation. After returning to school, Dwight graduated from the University of South Carolina Upstate in 1998 with a degree in accounting. He began his accounting career at McAbee, Talbert, Halliday, a local downtown CPA firm.

Dwight is involved in the community and is a graduate of Leadership Spartanburg; currently he holds a position on the Leadership Spartanburg Board of Regents as well as the Leadership Spartanburg Alumni Association. He is the treasurer for Shoresbrook Homeowners, Inc.

Dwight is married to Ingrid Phillips, and has three children, Meagan Phillips McLeod, who resides in Albany, Georgia with her new husband, Jason McLeod, Jared Phillips, who attends The University of South Carolina Upstate and Maddeline Phillips who lives at home and attends Dorman High School.

Dwight began his service on the board of Spartanburg Downtown Association in 2010.

