Marci Kloskey is the owner of The Lemon Peel, a women's shoe boutique in downtown Spartanburg.

Marci earned her bachelor's degree from Clemson University in marketing with a minor in management. She has been in some form of sales or management since graduation. Marci has been employed with Novo Nordisk, Inc. for the last 10 years and has had a successful sales career in the pharmaceutical industry. She is currently a specialty sales representative covering the area from Charlotte, North Carolina to Anderson, South Carolina.

About 5 years ago, Marci set out to make her own little piece of downtown Spartanburg special. She bought their building in 2004 and after much time and renovation she moved in and loves being in the heart of downtown. The Lemon Peel came from her love of shoes and fashion and with just a few creative ideas in a matter of weeks The Lemon Peel was born!! Marketing and merchandising her business are a passion and has been great fun.

Marci and her husband Rick have 3 children, 2 of which are married with children. They both love spending as much time with their grandbabies as they can!

Marci has served on the SDA Board of Directors since 2008.
